VAE NEGLECTIS

Night 2. After Vae Victus crossed paths with Rezin, with the Queen of the Ring agreeing to face the Goat Bastard at MAXDEF.

Henry Keyes walks down a backstage hallway, Favoured Saints belt over his shoulder, when a voice calls out.

“Cool Murder Club you guys started.”

Keyes stops and turns. The 8-Bit Luchador, Leyenda de Ocho, steps forward.

LDO:

I guess my invitation is still in the mail?

A genuine look of confusion washes over Keyes's face.

Henry Keyes:

...invitation?

LDO:

Well sure, I mean...I did take care of the ship all those months. I did all the wrestling on DEFTv to pay the bills while you were unavailable.

Henry Keyes:

And?

Ocho expected something warmer from his long-time travel companion.

LDO:

...and? Seriously? You know, something's really been bothering me lately - this whole notion you put forward that Lindsay Troy is the only one who has your back, that Lindsay Troy is the center of the universe and can do no wrong - Lindsay Troy wasn't the only one there for you, Henry! I was there! Every day, for months, and I still want to be there for you!

Henry lets out a sigh and closes his one visible eye.

Henry Keyes:

You don't get it, and that's ok. I can't expect you to understand why I have to do this, because this isn't your fight, kid.

LDO:

Pardon?

Henry Keyes:

This isn't your fight. Vae Victus is walking down a death march the likes of which you are incapable of following. And sure, full credit - you stepped up to the big time and wrestled every show. Didn't do much winning, did you?

LDO frowns at this.

Henry Keyes:

There's a brewing war bubbling inside Miss Troy, and it's consumed me as well. It's apparently not there for you, so it is what it is. Now, I appreciate you holding down the fort as best you could, but maybe it's time for you to head back down to BRAZEN. I heard they're bringing up a guy dressed like an armadillo soon, should be more your speed.

Keyes starts to walk off and bumps Ocho's shoulder. At this, Ocho whips around and grabs Keyes by the shoulder, pulling him face to face. Both men's eyes are hot with anger - Ocho at the verbal insult, Keyes at the physical one.

LDO:

You know something? I freaking idolized you, man. People in DEFIANCE ignore the fact that I've been a champion in other places, but I didn't care because I hitched my wagon to the Airship Goddamn Pirate. Future FIST. Purest hero I ever saw, all the talent in the world - you had EVERYTHING, you ass. I was willing to throw myself under a stupid Plague Doctor mask and dance to Fatboy Slim like an idiot because I knew I was under the learning tree of the wrestler I wished I could've been. And now...

Ocho gives Keyes a once-over with his eyes.

LDO:

Now you're just a sonofabitch who needs to be stopped.

Keyes squints and leans in.

Henry Keyes:

And you think YOU'RE the one to do it, kid?

LDO:

Lindsay Troy doesn't know you better than anyone in the locker room - I do. And I'll take that Favoured Saints Championship from you faster than you can say Scrow On A Yacht.

Keyes sneers.

Henry Keyes:

Well, then. What are we waiting for?

Keyes storms off in a huff. Ocho collects himself with a deep breath, before saying to himself:

LDO:

You're not the only one around here who can change.

SORRY - WE'RE CLOSED

What a nightmare. What a goddamn nightmare.

It's all gone.

Brock Newbludd groans with exertion as he lifts the still smoking piece of rubble up and tosses it aside. Kneeling in the middle of the charred ruins that once was Ballyhoo Brew, the veteran wrestler, and now former bar owner reaches down and procures a framed picture from the wreckage. Newbludd gently wipes away the soot from the glass frame and sighs at the photo of himself and Pat Cassidy standing in front of Ballyhoo on the day of it's opening.

Brock Newbludd:

Oh, how the turn fuckin' tables...

Rising up with the picture still held in both hands, Brock locates his best friend standing in the burned-out husk of Ballyhoo's walk-in cooler. Wearing the same angry expression as Newbludd, Cassidy snatches a bottle of beer out of the rubble and twists the top off. Cassidy takes a drink, wipes his mouth, and locks eyes with Brock.

Pat Cassidy:

Fucking. Hell.

Nodding his head in agreement, Brock tucks the charred photo under one arm and motions for Pat to toss him a beer. Cassidy reaches down and digs a second bottle out, tossing it to Brock. Cracking the beer open, Newbludd takes a long pull from the bottle and shakes his head.

Brock Newbludd:

This is the craziest shit I've ever been a part of, man. It's all fun and games until someone burns your house down, eh?

Bending down again, Brock pulls a blackened toothbrush out of the rubble and sighs.

Brock Newbludd:

I literally only have the clothes on my back right now, bro.

Cassidy looks around, taking it all in, and seems about to say something when he's interrupted by Brock's cell phone ringing. Newbludd takes on the phone and glances at the screen.

Brock Newbludd:

It's Shev. They called her back down to the station.

Brock clicks on the screen, putting the phone to his ear. Several tense minutes follow where we can't hear what is being said, Brock just mutters affirmatives to in response. Cassidy stands, arms folded, awaiting the outcome of this conversation. Brock's face noticeably hardens and grows angrier during the conversation, causing Cassidy's eyebrows to raise.

Brock Newbludd:

Okay. I'll tell him. See you later.

Brock hangs up, looking to his partner.

Brock Newludd:

She just left the cop shop. Couple of new developments.

Cassidy makes the "aaaaannnnnd?" motion.

Brock Newbludd:

The Sevens have airtight alibis.

Cassidy fucking explodes.

Pat Cassidy:

ARE YOU SHITTING ME!? They fuckin' filmed themselves at the scene of the fuckin' crime! They've been psychopaths on national fuckin' television for nine months! They have ALBIS!? Gee, I wonder if whoever is vouching for them is fucking lying!? What assclown is saying...

Brock Newbludd:

Siobhan. Fuckin' Shev, dude.

That stops Cassidy in his tracks.

Brock Newbludd:

She knows they did it. You know they did it. I know they did it. Hell, the world knows they did it. But she can't lie to the cops, even if that lie leads to the damn truth. She says they were there all night but didn't leave her sight once. How two seven foot tall identical idiots can just vanish is beyond me, bro.

Cassidy barks out an unbelieving laugh.

Pat Cassidy:

So someone else did it! Morrow! Vargas! That other guy! We can't let them off the hook here, I mean...

Brock's look stops Cassidy from gearing up for another rant.

Pat Cassidy:

What... what, there's more?

Brock nods sadly.

Brock Newbludd:

The cops told Shev... the fire started in our office. They suspect it was arson. Something tells me she wasn't dealing with the top brass because...

Brock spreads his arms and takes in the smoking scenery.

Brock Newbludd:

You don't need to be Sherlock fucking Holmes to come to that conclusion.

Pat Cassidy:

NO SHIT IT WAS ARSON! It was the fucking...

Brock Newbludd:

You're not hearing me, dude. The office. The locked office.

Cassidy blinks. He's not sure where this is going.

Brock Newbludd:

Whoever started the fire... had a key. Remember... remember how you lost your key last week? It was weird how it just disappeared out of your bag, remember?

Now it's beginning to dawn on Pat Cassidy. The color drains away from his face. He sits suddenly, sending fluffs of soot into the air. He places both hands on his head.

Pat Cassidy:

Fuck. This is...

He looks to his tag team partner with sorrow in his eyes. It falls into place: not only was this an act of aggression by The Lucky Sevens, but an act of betrayal by someone else.

Pat Cassidy:

...I fuckin' did this.

Brock sighs, shaking his head.

Brock Newbludd:

Look... maybe it wasn't her...I mean it would make sense...but why now? And why bother with all the manager shit, right? Something's missin' from the equation...

Cassidy is on his feet in an instant.

Pat Cassidy:

Like hell it wasn't her. She fucking played me. Everyone told me. Siobhan. Davey. You. "Nah guys, we can trust her." What the fuck. I'm a fool. Blinded by a pair of batting eyelashes like a God damn seventh grader. I got played for a fucking fool. She stole my key and gave it to them. That was the plan the whole fucking time, wasn't it?

Cassidy looks at the beer bottle in his hand and he chucks into the ground as hard as he can, shattering it.

Pat Cassidy:

I'm so sorry. I didn't... I didn't mean for this... shit...

Newbludd walks over and puts a hand on his friends shoulder.

Brock Newbludd:

This wasn't your fault. Don't beat yourself up about it, man. Ballyhoo was just a building. It can be rebuilt. What this place represented...

Brock squeezes Pat's shoulder and shakes him slightly.

Brock Newbludd:

That's still standing. That's still alive, and you better believe, it's still special man. The spirit of Ballyhoo Brew is still kickin' and it's a vengeful one. You feelin' me?

Pat Cassidy:

Yeah. You're wrong, though. This is my fault. But right now I start making things right. We find those dickheads and end this between us. Between all of us. For good.

Brock Newbludd:

That's what I like to hear, bro.

The Saturday Night Specials turn to take one final look at the rubble that was once their business... their home.

Brock Newbludd:

She was a fucking beaut, wasn't she?

Pat Cassidy:

That she was, man. That she was.

Black screen. Last thing we hear is the sound of the CLINK of a two glasses.

URIEL CORTEZ vs. MASSIVE COWBOY

TITANS ALWAYS STAND TALL!

♪ "Giants" by Little V. ♪

The group name forms in a cursive gold with diamond-themed pattern on the DEFIATRON. And with that... A LOUD explosion of gold pyro now goes OFF! Uriel Cortez getting a great ovation from the crowd! The leader of Los Tres Titanes heading to the ring now. Next week, he takes on Rick Dickulous of Cerberus. That's going to be the HOSSFITE OF HOSSFITES here in DEFIANCE, so right now Uriel wants to get himself in fighting shape.

Cortez sheds his coat and the LTT towel and storms to the ring. When the giant gets there, he plants a hefty boot on the ring apron then pulls himself up with the ropes before stepping over the ropes and into the ring. Lance:

It's the lariat of MASSIVE Cowboy versus the devastating chops of Uriel Cortez! Who wins out tonight?

Cowboy ditches the bullrope and hat, then heads in. Uriel offers him a hand, but MASSIVE Cowboy slaps the hand away! Uriel shrugs as referee Rex Knox calls for the bell.

DING DING

Uriel wants to lock up, but MASSIVE Cowboy instead runs right into The Titan of Industry! He backs up a little bit, but doesn't go down. When he realizes what kind of match this is going to be, Uriel dares the BRAZEN cowboy to take his best shot. He stands in place while MASSIVE Cowboy goes for the ropes and hits him with another shoulder... but still doesn't go down. Cortez slaps his chest, and yells out to the Faithful.

Uriel Cortez:

Uriel Cortez picks up MASSIVE Cowboy and then throws him into the corner. He measures him up again... but before he is able to hit another chop, MASSIVE Cowboy sidesteps out of the way! The Faithful are shocked when Cowboy takes it to Uriel with a few more shots of his own! He pummels Uriel's chest with a few clubbing blows, but Cortez grabs him by the throat and walks out of the corner. When he does that, Cowboy fights back and elbows the arm, then stomps the leg.

Lance:

MASSIVE Cowboy with some fight! Now he's going to the knee of Cortez!

He hits the knee of Cortez with a pair of boots, then goes low with a shoulder that finally brings The Titan of Industry to a knee. When MASSIVE Cowboy gets upright, he throws the elbow pad off and then runs the ropes... then LEVELS Cortez with a big Lariat! The crowd is stunned!

Cortez stops the lariat with another STIFF open-handed chop of his own! Cowboy holds his right arm in pain!

DDK:

Wow! I don't think I've ever seen a lariat blocked with a chop to the arm, but here we go!

Cortez knocks Cowboy off his feet with a huge running clothesline. When he gets back up, Cortez comes off the other side and then mows him down with a second one. Cowboy is completely knocked silly when get gets picked up and then pushed to the corner. The Titan of Industry measures him up and then hits a running back elbow, then charges off the ropes to come back and turn MASSIVE Cowboy inside out with a huge running shoulder block! TESTING, TESTING

Ned Reform sits alone in his office.

He's silent... the only sound in the room is the light ticking of a wall clock. Reform sits, hunched over his desk with his hands supporting his chin. He looks forlorn. Even looking at his many degrees on the wall (which are conveniently shielded by the glare from his window) doesn't seem to be cheering him up.

The Good Doctor sighs. He reaches down and opens up the sliding drawer on his desk. Reaches inside - pulls out a folded up piece of shiny paper. Reform glances around, ensuring he is alone... before opening the paper. And we see it is in fact no paper at all... it's a poster.

It's a wall poster of a scantily clad Elise Ares.

Reform stares at the poster. With hatred? With regret? With sadness? With... something else?

Ned sighs again before placing a single hand on Elise's cheek...

BAM!

Reform's door swings open. TA Cole, dressed like a preppy college student, barges in. Reform immediately flings the Elise Ares poster up into the air and turns to acknowledge his protege with a beet red face. It takes Cole a second, but he seems to realize that he interrupted something.

TA Cole:

Dr. Reform! I'm sorry! I just...

Ned Reform:

No, no, no, Levi. It's alright.

Reform discreetly uses his left foot to pull the poster under his desk and out of eye sight.

TA Cole:

It's just... man, me and the guys sure hate to see you like this, doctor. All withdrawn. We miss your guidance.

Reform frowns. He speaks in anger... and it grows in intensity with every sentence.

Ned Reform:

I have no doubt that you do. But can you truly assign blame for my acting this way, Levi? Week after week, a group of charlatans continues to embarrass me. I am a victim! A victim of fraud! Of a con of the highest order! I must admit I do not know how she's pulling it off, but I will not allow a pretender to best me. I will think of a final challenge. A CHALLENGE LIKE NO OTHER! Trivia is for the simple! Chess is a fool's game! No, this will be a challenge that even a con woman such as herself will be unable to best. The perfect trap! I will expose her, Levi. I will expose her like a raw nerve. The world will see her for what she is. You have my word.

Cole is grinning, getting fired up.

TA Cole:

I know you will! In fact, that's why I'm here. I have... well, I have an idea.

Reform stops, mid-rant. Looks to his tag partner / lackey.

Ned Reform:

You... have an idea? You?

Cole picks up that he may have overstepped his bounds a bit. He speaks cautiously.

TA Cole:

I do, sir. It's just... well, the whole thing is she keeps pretending to be smarter than you, right? So couldn't you just... you know... give her a test to see how smart she is?

Reform furrows his brow. Breaks out into a slow amused smile. He walks over to his compadre and pats him on the head as one would a dog who has decided not to shit on the carpet.

Ned Reform:

Oh, my friend. What a quaint way of thinking about this. How I envy your naivety. Truly, I mean that. It is... refreshing. And appreciated. We both know that you are not the visionary in this two man equation, but boy do I appreciate the effort.

Reform turns away from Cole, folding his hands behind his back.

Ned Reform:

Were it so simple, yes? If I could just sit her smug, pouty little derriere down and just give her a test. I could never be sure that she simply wouldn't cheat again. I will not underestimate that devious little kitten ever again. A test would be nice, Levi, but I doubt that...

Wait.

Wait.

A light bulb.

Ned Reform:

...a... a test...

A slow smile.

Ned Reform:

A test... to see how smart she is. Yes. YES! A test... to measure her... IQ...

He's speaking more to himself now.

Ned Reform: [whispering]

I've got you now. You've met your match, little minx.

The Good Doctor slowly turns to look at TA Cole. He launches a single finger into the air.

Ned Reform:

The Cognition Department at Yale. She... she can't fool the center. She can't outsmart that system. She'll sit down, be tested, and the truth will come out. A number. A single number to expose her lies to the entire world. YES! This may... this may be the best idea I've ever had!!

TA Cole:

You've done it again, doctor!

Cole and Reform briskly shake hands before breaking to put their schemes in motion as we fade elsewhere.

Titanness has been wrapped up in her own issues for so long, the news is apparently... well, news to her.

Titanness:

...I'm sorry they did that.

Jack Mace:

Aye. Not an excuse... but it's the truth.

The awkward tension between the two is palpable. Neither one knows exactly what to say until Mace finally speaks up. He looks disgusted in whatever is about to come out of his mouth next; something Titanness notices.

Jack Mace:

...Look. I owe Big and Tall after he did me a favor... but somethin' you gotta know about when he worked with me.

Her interest is piqued, though reluctantly so.

Jack Mace:

You need to know that fuckin' bloke wouldn't shut up about you or the little kid in the mask. The entire time, he kept saying he was doin' what we did to protect the both of you. It kinda worked... them Sevens got fired. Nobody's heard from the fuckin' clown. It's clear that Big and Tall tosser fancies you. Whatever you think he did or didn't do... Nicky Synz stands up and throws the horns up with both hands, waking up The Faithful! He grabs Thomas back inside the ring and then climbs onto the apron. He measures him carefully, then leaps over the ropes with a slingshot senton! He rolls back right into the cover!

Slaine kicks out!

Nicky grabs the wrist and neck of Slaine before pulling him back to his feet. He tries to set Slaine up for something, but when he tries the suplex... Slaine shifts his weight out and then hits a big pair of knees, then a big uppercut to send Nicky back away from the corner. Synz staggers back out, then leaves himself WIDE open for a massive running shotgun dropkick by Slaine out of the corner!

DDK:

HUGE shotgun dropkick! Synz is down! And now Slaine going up top?

Thomas Slaine heads out to the apron with the quickness, then starts to climb the ropes. When he gets up top, he measures up Nicky Synz, then takes flight and levels The Frontman of Synyster Sledge with a huge flying forearm off the top!

VIRTUALLY CHECKING IN

Phone in hand, Malak Garland frantically paces back and forth by a shipment of arena supplies. He checks his phone every few moments, hoping for a message to pop up. When it doesn't, the Snowflake Superstar sends yet another text.

Malak Garland: [reading as he types]

Hey, where are you? Are you okay? You have not been marked safe on social media yet. Just wanted to check in on you. This is my third message to you in the last five minutes that has gone unread but I know it's been delivered. Text back as soon as possible. Don't ignore me.

Malak's thumbs work faster than his mouth as he fires off message after message. The look of sheer panic doesn't leave his punchable face. Finally, a swoop and a ding later and Malak receives a return message. His eyes can't read it fast enough.

Malak Garland:

Yes! You are alive and well. Good. Took you long enough to reply to my texts. I literally can't believe they did that to you. Who do they think you are!?! Dummies.

Feeling his heartbeat beginning to calm, Malak rests easy against the closest wall. With his phone still unlocked and opened to messages, The Source of Envy allows his eyes to read the messages as many times as his little heart desires.

Malak Garland:

I gotta send one more text. Okay, you will be pleased to know that from now on I have hired a security detail to watch over you. I can't share more details with you at this moment but just know, soon enough, all will be revealed to you.

WHOA... TO THE VANQUISHED

The WrestlePlex has been quiet as of late.

Which isn't too surprising, with much of the DEFIANCE staff out on the road these past few weeks. But other than a skeleton crew of clerks and production members doing the day-to-day operations, the DEFArena has been dark, and the halls backstage have mostly been silent.

But today, that silence is about to be broken.

The golden spade at the end of a shovel raps daringly against the door to a private dressing room, with nondescript white paper sign taped on the front that reads "Vae Victus".

"Little Vics! Little Vics! Won't you please let me in!"

Rezin stands at the door, playing out a "Jack Nicholson from The Shining" tribute, albeit with Oscar Burns' newly claimed Golden Shovel in place of a fire ax. The Goat Bastard presses his ears against the door. His eyes dart left and right as he listens for any movement inside.

Rezin:

Not by the HAIRS on your chinny-chin-chins?

Not to suggest that LT has any hairs on her own; just going with the script here. Rezin wedges the tip of the shovel between the door and the jam, working at breaking the lock.

Rezin:

Then I'll SMOKE... an' I'll CHOKE... and BLAZE MY WAY IN!!

Despite a good deal of working the shovel, he's unsuccessful in forcing his way into the room. He grunts with frustration... until he just tries to the knob, and discovers it to be unlocked.

Rezin:

...HA-HA!! The Escape Artist strikes again!

It's unclear what part of this qualifies as an "escape", but... sure, whatever, we'll go with it. The inside of the dressing room is dark, and when he flips the lightswitch, it's expectedly also revealed to be unoccupied. A mischievous grin forms on Rezin's face.

Rezin:

Muahahaha... PERFECT!

He stalks the room, triumphant in his trespassing, and yet somewhat oblivious to the camera crew that's been following him around this entire time. It's a well-furnished room, which is the standard for DEFIANCE's top talent. Rezin fills his lungs, taking in the pervasive stench of luxury surrounding him.

Rezin:

Ugghh... I can practically SMELL the smugness!

He approaches the vanity on the far wall, and sneers at his own reflection in the mirror.

Rezin:

So... this must be where Lindsay Troy's FAKE FACE comes from! Where she looks herself in the EYE and comes to grips with the fact that she's a SELF-OBSSESSED SYMBOL of CRUEL ARROGANCE!!

A HOLE is punched through the screen as Rezin drives the shovel through it, and flings it across the room! The TV slides itself off of the edge of the shovel's tip into the nearest wall by the entrance. Standing ready to either knock or break into this clearly already broken-into door, is Jack Harmen. He tilts his head to the side, confused, his long red hair obscuring one side of his face.

Jack Harmen:

Ah, uh, hey Rezin... you wouldn't happen to know... where everybody's been for the past six weeks, wouldja?

Rezin is suddenly frozen in place.

Rezin: (awestruck)

...H-H-H... H-H-H-HHH...

Harmen rubs the back of his head, taking a moment to step into the room. While doing so, he steps onto the broken tv monitor further crunching it under his boot.

Jack Harmen:

I figure someone would have come to the ring asking me if I attacked Arthur... which, by the by, I didn't.

Confused but undeterred, Jack rips it up so he takes off her head as he does, leaving just the body displayed on the wall.

The chessboard in question is sitting on a table on the near wall, its pieces set mid-game. There's only one chair at the table, but Rezin doesn't seem to notice as he flips the board and sends the pieces scattering.

Rezin:

HAHAHA!! Take THAT, HENNERRY KEEYYYYEESS!! CHESS SUCKS!!

The Escape Artist's chaotic delight melts into confusion as he looks around the room. Something is missing here.

Rezin:

Wait a toke... where's the tiger cage?

Jack Harmen:

Detroit? Ooo. This looks fake and or expensive.

Harmen takes a Ming Vase and just throws it against the wall.

Shuffling back out into the hallway like a regular wrestling Cheech and Chong, Rezin frantically rips the “Vae Victus” sheet of paper off the door. Turns out, it’s NOT their private room, as the plaque on the door clearly reads “NED REFORM”, with “DR.” written before it using magic marker.

Rezin:

...ohh SHIT!! Uhh, Mister Harmen, sir... whadda we do about this?

Harmen leans in to get a better look, looks disappointed and then sticks his nose on the door, sniffing loudly. He turns and nods.

Jack Harmen:

We’re good. The marker’s dry. Let’s just...

Harmen tip toes out of the room. One step backward. Then two steps. Then bursts into a sprint, leaving wreckage behind in his wake. Rezin looks around wildly, and then rushes out himself. Harmen shouts “NOT THIS WAY! SPLIT UP!” from off screen.

After a few moments, we see Rezin run back the other direction, past the entrance to the locker room and off stage right.

Once again, as has become somewhat customary, we shift gears over to DEFIANCE's UpClose studio-set. A handsomely pre-recorded Lance Warner adjusts his glasses, and his posture, as he pivots towards the camera.

Lance:

It's time to get... UpClose. I'm Lance Warner.

The yellow lettering below his face confirms that statement as fact as Lance turns to a different camera just as the angle switches. So professional.

Lance:

Over the last several months, we've reserved time on UNCUT to retell a tale of brotherhood and betrayal... of unlikely friendship and inhuman rancor. The Masked Violators Story is a complicated one... one that has yet to be seen to its end. Despite, perhaps, the efforts of our guest this evening.

Turning towards another camera, we see that Lance is not alone on the set. Seated across from him with a certain stiff regalness about him, a dark figure waits.

Lance:

Lord Nigel Trickelbush, welcome to UNCUT: UpClose...

The camera cuts to His Lordship, a tight thin smile spread across his smarmy wrinkling face. His black bowler cap sits just slightly, almost mockingly, askew on his head. Eyes gray and piercing, the heavy, dark bags beneath them betray a level of exhaustion. Yellow lettering on the screen spells out his particularly unconventional name.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

It's an honor and a privilege, Dear Sir Lancelot.

Lance:

Is it safe to assume you've been following the story as we've presented it here?

Nigel splays his hands before him for effect before refolding them in a twisted steeple on his lap.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

I am pleased that you have, in your question, framed your scurrilous effort as a "presentation". It reveals an understanding that what you've shown has been sensationalized and scandalized to the point of incredulity. What you have "presented" as "fact" is as slanted and as one-sided as anything I've ever seen on this or any program and I am grateful for the opportunity to not just set the record straight... but to also express my disappointment. My disappointment in YOU, Mr. Warner.

Good Ol' Lance doesn't sell it.

Lance:

Two weeks ago on this program, we heard from Masked Violator #1 who reasserted his commitment to, as he put it, "undo" what you've done to the man we call "Corvo Alpha"--

Nigel leans forward, sneering.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Has it occurred to you that I haven't "done" anything?

The word "done" is delivered with some effect and more venom.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Might you have considered that what I've asserted all along might be the truth? Could it be that you've pondered that it was Corvo Alpha who sought ME out?

As he speaks, still images of Alpha's unbridled violence scroll across our screens, with Lord Nigel relegated to a small corner box.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Have you marveled at the possibility he'd grown unexcited of his hum-drum, scrape-by life? Bored of his miserable family? Weary from being called "Number Two" behind a lesser man? Would it be so shocking to think that a trodden, outspent man might aspire to something greater? That he might leave the anguish of a ruined life behind to craft something better? To fashion something more perfect – on HIS terms? No one else's?

Coming back to Nigel full screen, we immediately regret it.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Answer me, Warner. Have you given any thought that perhaps Masked Violator #2 wanted to be MORE than a mask-wearing flunky? That, maybe, this is who he has always been? Deep down?

Lance moves to answer but is cut off again, more harshly this time. Louder.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Do you think, perchance, that I didn't steal MV2 at all? Is there a reality out there, somewhere, that you might accept where I've set Corvo Alpha free?!?

The lenses of Warner's glasses flare under the lights but he never blinks behind them.

Lance:

No matter what I think, no matter the truth of it all... if this is what MV2 wanted or not... it strikes me as all just... terribly sad.

Lord Nigel near-dramatically sets back in his seat, head cocked to the side for a breath of a moment.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

"Sad", he says.

The camera slow-burn-zooms on Nigel's quizzical face.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Isn't it "sad" how I've been painted the villain? Isn't it sad that I've been cast as a manipulative monster while a man who's name no one knows, who's face no one knows, who's CHARACTER, no one truly knows, his word is accepted

Lord Nigel slowly rises to his feet. You'll find the volume and timber of his voice rises with him. His voice drips with spite.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Just as you, just as "MV1", just as the world cast my boy aside... took him for granted... resented him and rejected him, I reject you. I repudiate all of you. How dare you sit on your high horse and judge the decisions I was forced to make? How dare you "masked hero" stamp me the scoundrel?! He won't rest until I'm "undone"?

Trickelbush levels a pointed, bony, pale finger in Warner's face. He looms over our reporter like impending doom.

Leaning back in his chair, Nigel's smile is a melancholy smear.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

If you want to feel "sad" about something, feel sorry about that. Know that, all along the way, I worked to avoid what is coming. I've toiled to avert the crisis you mock with your perverse "presentation". The calamity you've not only invited, but that you've actively promoted.

Nigel stands again, this time far less confrontationally. Tugging at the waist of his jacket, Lord Trickelbush puffs out his chest.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

I imagine you'll get your collective wish. And when it's over, "MV1" will have no choice... but to move on. Because he'll see that Corvo Alpha undoubtedly has moved on from him.

On a dime, Nigel turns to make a stern exit from the set, but this time it's Warner who cuts his man off, throwing an arm up to symbolically block him.

Lance:

We haven't seen Corvo Alpha in weeks... does he even still answer to you?

Nigel frowns.

Lord Nigel Trickelbush:

Again, you miss the mark. A breathtaking display of ignorance. I'll see you at DEFTv, Lancelot.

Nigel walks off, crossing the hard camera abruptly as Lance finds it with his steely, grizzled gaze.

The bumps in the road make it hard to film but nonetheless, the most resilient Snowflake Superstar in existence persists by filming himself inside a taxi with a selfie stick in hand.

Malak Garland:

Don't I look good. I have no idea what Magdalena is talking about.

The cab driver minds his own business as they head towards the airport so Malak can jetset off to wherever DEFIANCE is heading next.

Malak Garland:

I think this footage might be good if I decide to start my own vlog. What a deliciously delectable idea. I need some B roll footage though.

Malak points the lens of his phone camera out the window to capture some of the rural landscape.

Malak Garland:

I think this is an idea I will have to text Percy about. He needs to add music to my B roll footage.

Malak mucks about in the backseat until the cab pulls up to the airport terminal. He gets out and the cabbie is quick to unload Malak's many belongings. Garland pays the man via his preferred contactless payment method.

Malak Garland:

Thank you for your service and dedication. I would have liked a bigger taxi next time though so that will reflect in your tip. I usually ride in van cabs and this is clearly a sedan. I'm not about that life. Maybe do better next time, yeah?

Malak grabs his wheelee bag and shuffles into the terminal. He has to set his selfie stick down as he remembers he needs an item from his luggage. He swings the bag open and much to his surprise, his paper championship belt is the first thing laying on top.

Malak Garland:

Oh me, oh my. It's my Paper title belt! I kind of forgot about you if I'm being honest, which I always am. Lots to unpack here but not literally. I just need my anti-anxiety meds but now that I've laid eyes upon my title belt, a memory has been unlocked for me!

Malak gently touches the belt as he picks up his selfie stick and records the belt on top of his belongings.

Malak Garland:

See this, everyone? This is living proof I am a champion of life. I am the Paper champion after all! Maybe I should defend this belt!?! Maybe? Hmmmm, quite a conundrum indeed. I've held onto this thing for quite some time but it's certainly not the record length. I tell you what, maybe on a future episode Uncut I will build some resiliency and defend this belt with honor.

Malak grabs his anti-anxiety meds and closes the lid to the luggage.

Malak Garland:

But for now, this belt will stay where it belongs; with me, collecting dust.

The feed to his phone abruptly cuts.

FAVORED SAINTS CHAMPIONSHIP: HENRY KEYES Â© vs. LEYENDA DE OCHO

Lance:

Coming up next, we've got a HELL of a main event on our hands, folks!

DDK:

That's right, Lance - Henry Keyes has successfully defended his Favoured Saints Championship against Conor Fuse and Rezin, but now he faces a man that, honestly, I can't believe would ever stand opposed to him in a wrestling ring - the Cartridge Cruiser himself, Leyenda de Ocho!

Lance:

The man they call LDO has made major waves in BRAZEN and on DEFtv, and as we saw earlier tonight, things have gotten VERY personal VERY quickly. Ocho feels slighted that he hasn't been included in Vae Victus's plans, Keeps.

DDK:

And Keyes wasn't very subtle about why - he thinks the luchador isn't up to snuff! Ocho certainly has a chance to prove him wrong tonight!

Henry Keyes emerges from the curtain with the Favoured Saints Championship around his waist. He rolls his shoulders a few times, perhaps unknotting some knots from his earlier tag team match against the New Rain City Ronin, before slowly making his way to the ring.

Introducing first, from San Francisco, California...weighing in at TWO hundred FORTY-NINE pounds, HE IS THE KRRRRRRRRRRRAKEN! Henry! KEEEEEEEEEEEEEEYES!

The boo-to-cheer ratio continues to shift in a dark direction as Keyes holds the Favoured Saints belt high in the air in the center of the ring.

Lance:

The champion chooses to come out first - maybe he's sending a message to his former protégé?

DDK:

Say what you will about Henry Keyes, and I have, and I will continue to do so...he's never been a man to back down from a challenge. Leyenda de Ocho had strong words for him as we saw earlier tonight, and it doesn't surprise me for a SECOND that Keyes would be chomping at the bit for this fight.

The slow, heavy soul metal beats fade out as Keyes prowls, cat-like, back and forth in the ring. A faint LDO chant picks up and quickly becomes not-so-faint as the fans chomp at the proverbial bit at this matchup. We expect to hear the nouveau-80's stylings of the Protomen any second now to introduce the beloved Favoured Saints challenger, the once-Tiniest-Plague-Doctor, but it doesn't come.

What we hear instead pops the handful of die-hard BRAZEN fans in the crowd, HARD.

♪ "Dragon Roost Island" by Mariachi Entertainment System ♪

As southwest-style acoustic guitars, flute, fiddles, and mariachi trumpets fill the air, we don't see the familiar luchador trappings of Leyenda de Ocho, which last we saw on DEFtv included gears and other homages to Henry Keyes. Instead, we see him in gear only familiar to eagle-eyed fans of DEFIANCE's junior brand. He wears white trunks and rodeo chaps complete with white fringe, a black-and-white cow print poncho, a simple black mask that wraps around the entire top half of his head (save for eye holes), and a white ten gallon cowboy hat.

Darren Quimbey:

Aaaaand his opponent! Hailing from THE OLD WEST! Weighing in at ONE hundred EIGHTY eight pounds...he is THE GUNSLINGER...THE! WHITE! HAAAAAAAAAAAAAT!

Lance:

Ocho has fought as The White Hat on occasion in BRAZEN, and rumors abound that there's even a THIRD Face of Ocho, but man - I don't think anyone expected this tonight!

DDK:

And look at Keyes! He didn't expect this either!

Indeed, Henry Keyes is BUG-EYED at the sight of The White Hat. He leans over the top ropes facing the ramp and shouts at his opponent, asking if he thinks this is some sort of game to him. White Hat ignores him, methodically making his way to the ring with a John Wayne strut that would make cowboys and Airship Pirates proud.

Lance:

What's important to know about The White Hat is that he's cagey, he's deliberate, and most importantly - he's got a code.

DDK:

I'm going to go out on a limb - Keyes isn't following that code, is he?

Lance:

Unlikely, which is why we're seeing The Gunslinger here and now!

White Hat hands his hat and poncho to a ringside crew member as music fades and "HO-LY SHIT! HO-LY SHIT!" chants pepper the crowd. Referee Johnny Fastcountini has to forcibly direct Keyes into an opposite corner because he's so bug-eyed and ready to fight. White Hat seems cool, calm, and collected. Fastcountini holds up the Favoured Saints title before handing it off and signaling for the bell.

DING DING

Keyes immediately launches forward looking to lock in a collar-and-elbow, and White Hat simply ducks beneath his grasping arms and takes a few steps around the ring. Angered by this, Keyes charges forward and swings hard with a Propeller Edge Chop attempt, which White Hat nimbly ducks, continuing his steps around the ring. Another chop attempt, another duck. Keyes puts his arms on his hips and huffs, pissed at the lack of actual fighting. White Hat is stonefaced.

Lance:

A matador and a bull if I ever saw one!

DDK:

He said he knew Keyes better than anyone in the locker room - so far, so true!

Keyes turns to his much smaller opponent and beckons him forward.

Henry Keyes:

You said you wanted a fight! FIGHT ME!

White Hat chooses not to reply with his words, instead holding his hand up. Keyes is perplexed that a man 60-plus pounds lighter than him would initiate a test of strength. After examining the hand for a moment, Keyes raises his own hand high in the air - much higher than White Hat's. Keyes gives a smirk as the crowd boos.

Lance:

Keyes clearly views this fight as a foregone conclusion.

DDK:

But look at White Hat here - he's not rattled at all!

Indeed, White Hat's hand continues to be raised, and after Keyes realizes that his taunt didn't land with his opponent, he reaches to clasp hands - only for White Hat to shoot low! He's got control of Keyes's left leg, and despite Keyes's best attempts to hop and regain balance, White Hat is able to pull at the leg and send him crashing into the ground! White Hat gives a few swift kicks to the downed Keyes's thigh before the overpowering strength of Keyes enables him to get out of the predicament and back to his feet. Keyes hurries forward and grabs a collar-and-elbow onto White Hat before gripping hard and LAUNCHING him into the corner - only for White Hat to catch himself on the top ropes and casually reposition himself so that he's sitting on the top turnbuckle!

OHHHHHHH!

Keyes is stunned at the sight for a moment before charging forward. White Hat flips over the charging Keyes and lands on his feet, and as Keyes turns around, White Hat catches him with a spinning kick to the abdomen, followed by a leg kick and an uppercut. Keyes is UNHAPPY at being uppercutted and gains collar-and-elbow control once again, this time inching closer to the ropes and launching his diminutive opponent over the top to the outside!

Lance:

Oooh! Bad landing for White Hat on the outside!

DDK:

Counter-punching is great, but it's hard to have an answer for the brute strength of The Kraken!

White Hat shakes the cobwebs out as he works towards regaining his bearings. Johnny Fastcountini, name coming to fruition, is somehow already on 6. At this revelation, White Hat scrambles up and launches himself under the bottom rope into the ring. Keyes immediately pounces, clubbing his opponent wherever he can with raining elbow strikes. Fastcountini quickly counts to four, forcing a break, and before Keyes can fully get to his feet, he's met with a sudden chop block!

Henry Keyes:

White Hat wastes no time and CRANKS the chop-blocked leg into an almost bridging single-leg Boston Crab! The crowd rises quickly, this hold looking way gnarlier than they would have EVER expected to see given the matchup and the fact that this is advertised as an UNCUT match. Fastcountini is pleading with Keyes, asking if he's ready to submit, but after an excruciatingly long stretch of time, and with a lurch and a heave, Keyes is able to overpower White Hat and kick him off, sending him stumbling to the corner. Keyes gets to his feet, though he's clearly favoring that chop-blocked leg, and he charges forward with a European Uppercut that lands FLUSH on White Hat.

Keyes clearly knows how close he came to losing his Favoured Saints championship as he scurries to the ropes for a breather. The one eye we see goes back and forth between White Hat, the ring corner, and back and forth again. Sweating, disheveled, and scrambled, Keyes finally makes his way to his feet - White Hat, on the other hand, looks as cool and calm as the opening moments of the match. Keyes's visible eye goes wide as he heaves with deep breaths in the corner - after a few moments, he tiredly beckons his man to Come At Him, Bro. White Hat senses weakness and charges forward - Keyes springs to action, sidestepping White Hat's oncoming lariat and sending him face first into the turnbuckle! Without giving him a moment's respite, Keyes grabs the back of White Hat's head and RAMS him into the top turnbuckle over, and over, and over again! Fastcountini interjects and insists upon a break, which Keyes obliges - only for him to come in for something truly gross.
